'SUDDEN LOSS'

PHILIP SEYMOUR HOFFMAN FOUND DEAD OF APPARENT OVERDOSE

Reuters

NEW YORK Philip Seymour Hoffman, one of the leading actors of his generation, who won an Academy Award for his title role in the film "Capote," was found dead in his Manhattan apartment Sunday in what a New York police source described as an apparent drug overdose.

Hoffman, 46, was found unresponsive on the bathroom floor of his Greenwich Village apartment by police responding to a 911 call, and Emergency Medical Service workers declared him dead on the scene, New York City police said in a statement. An investigation was ongoing.

A police spokesman said investigators found Hoffman with a syringe in his arm and recovered two small plastic bags in the apartment containing a substance suspected of being heroin. A police department source earlier told Reuters that Hoffman had died of an apparent drug overdose.

Hoffman, who is survived by three children with his partner Mimi O'Donnell, had detailed his struggles with substance abuse in the past.

"We are devastated by the loss of our beloved Phil and appreciate the outpouring of love and support we have received from everyone," Hoffman's family said in a statement issued through his publicist.

"This is a tragic and sudden loss and we ask that you respect our privacy during this time of grieving. Please keep Phil in your thoughts and prayers," it added. A representative said the family would not make any further statements for now.

Onlookers gathered Sunday afternoon near Hoffman's apartment in a four-story red brick building in a fashionable neighborhood of the West Village, where many other actors keep homes. The entire block was cordoned off by police.

Rachel Melman, a neighbor who described herself as a fan, said she frequently saw him around the neighborhood.

"I never spoke to him, but I always wanted to," she said, adding that she would see him sitting on the scaffolding of the building, often dressed in socks and no shoes, "just reading and hanging out out there."

"Of course I'm sad. It was such a shocker," she said.

Death won't affect 'Hunger Games' releases

Bloomberg

The unexpected death of Philip Seymour Hoffman won't affect the release of two planned "Hunger Games" movies, according to a person with knowledge of the situation.

Hoffman's work on "The Hunger Games: Mockingjay, Part 1" was substantially complete and he had seven remaining days to shoot on "The Hunger Games: Mockingjay, Part 2," said the person, who asked not to be named because of the subject's sensitivity.

He played the pivotal character of Plutarch Heavensbee, the head gamemaker in Lions Gate Entertainment Corp.'s "The Hunger Games: Catching Fire" last year, and was cast in the same role for the third and fourth films in the series, based on the books by Suzanne Collins.

"Philip Seymour Hoffman was a singular talent and one of the most gifted actors of our generation," the studio, based in Santa Monica, Calif., said in a statement.

I write this column in defense of the lava lamp.

You might ask, "Wait, why do we need a column in defense of the lava lamp? You mean the decorative novelty item that uses an incandescent bulb to heat colored wax within a clear or translucent fluid thus producing mildly interesting psychedelic shapes? Why? Isn't there a polar vortex or a Syrian civil war that requires attention?"

However, I feel as though it's imperative that I come to the defense of the lava lamp because I recently brought my lava lamp back from my childhood bedroom to my highly adult apartment, and upon discovering this, my friends commented, and I quote: "Bwahahaha."

Apparently, at some point the unelected arbiters of cool decided that lava lamps are stupid, and I'm here to say that those people don't know their ass from their lava lamps. Because lava lamps are cool. They've never stopped being cool. Ever since the British accountant Edward Craven Walker first concocted the technological wizardry that produced the lava lamp in 1963 (that is a for-real researched fact, by the way), lava lamps have been on one solid, uninterrupted ride of cool.

Did I say to myself when I was in sixth grade and just taking my first hesitant steps into puberty, "Mom, if you buy me this jet black lava lamp with maroon blobs contorting in enchanting randomized choreographies, the girls will think I'm rad?"

Yes. I did.

Did I also think to myself, "And then when I'm 30 and single and making just enough money to not qualify for food stamps and Medicaid, I'll discover this lava lamp because my mom will say to me, 'You're 30. Get your lava lamp out of my house,' and I'll return that lava lamp to its proper place, creating captivating shadows in the dark, oracular corners of my soul, and it'll be raining babes once again?"

Of course. Obviously.

Because I don't need to defend the lava lamp. The lava lamp defends itself. The lava lamp is not mood-setting—it's mood-defining. It's the atavistic, super-sensory, transcendental apparatus cutting through the gossamer night of our purposeless blink of existence. It's the respite from the cold, bleak winter of our minutes and hours, the rescue within the kingdoms of post-industrial ennui, the necromantic revitalization of eras lost, solace vaporized, forked paths of the multiverse rendered mute, inert, leaden, decimated by the woebegone decisions of purposeless human flux. It is the roaming, the rapture, the renaissance—the moment of dread unraveled. The lava lamp resuscitates the burning synaptic fire so irresponsibly designated a soul and resets the neurons, rekindles the axons, sends those filaments of protoplasm to heights conquered only in the exulting flight of dreams, that sacred tick when earthbound observation recedes, replaced by the retrieved sentence of the womb, of amniotic asylum, of sanctuary from dread, drift and lust, and in its place you find yourself in your becoming, in your dimethyltryptamine trance, converging on the accretion of all hope, sorrow and love, wandering in wonder at the dark caverns of the heart.

Also, they look pretty sweet when you're stoned.

TAX TIME IS HERE!

Chicago Tribune

Tax season kicked off Friday, when the Internal Revenue Service began accepting federal returns.

As in the past, there are several ways for taxpayers with simple returns to do their taxes for free (which should be the case for most college-age filers). And this year, you can even use a smartphone to complete a return, using new mobile apps being rolled out by major tax-prep companies.

Buy a home in 2013? Take on freelance work? In cases where your tax situation is more complicated, you may need to open your wallet in order to get the necessary forms and deductions. But discounts are available—if you act early.

Depending on how much you earned last year, you can complete your federal return for free through the IRS' Free File program. To qualify, your 2013 adjusted gross income (earnings minus certain deductions) must be $58,000 or less. (If you're married and file jointly, the income limit applies to your combined earnings.) To get started, go to irs.gov/freefile.

Push for Obama library

University of Chicago: Library would spur growth on South Side

Chicago Tribune

As the effort to preserve the legacy of President Obama through a presidential library officially gets underway, the University of Chicago announced an aggressive push for an off-campus site on the South Side.

U. of C. President Robert Zimmer said Friday that the Hyde Park university will seek to land the library in an effort to spur economic growth in nearby neighborhoods.

"I strongly believe the Obama Presidential Library would be ideal for one of our neighboring communities on the South Side of Chicago," Zimmer said in a statement. "A presidential library would mark a watershed moment for the South Side, catalyzing significant and sustained economic opportunity in an area poised to make the most of such promise."

The university has pulled together a diverse advisory committee to work on the bid. It's made up of prominent business people and community leaders from the Chicago Urban League, the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and the DuSable Museum of African American History, among others.

The U. of C. went public with its intentions just hours after an announcement that the Barack H. Obama Foundation had been formed to oversee the development of the presidential library.

For leadership of the foundation, Obama once again turned to members of his trusted inner circle, a small group of supporters who worked to send him to the White House in 2008 and to keep him there in 2012.

Chicago businessman Marty Nesbitt, a close friend of the president and his former campaign treasurer, said Friday that Obama asked him to serve on the foundation. Other board members are Julianna Smoot, who was deputy campaign manager for Obama's 2012 run, and Kevin Poorman, who heads a Chicago investment firm founded by Commerce Secretary Penny Pritzker.

Nesbitt said the foundation is charged with developing a library that reflects the president's values and priorities. He said it will focus on issues like economic opportunity and on promoting peace, justice and dignity worldwide.

UIC Chancellor Paula Allen-Meares said her Near West Side institution remains interested in hosting the library. Chicago State University on the Far South Side also has expressed interest. Additional competition is expected from Columbia University in New York, and the University of Hawaii.

Daley to remain in ICU

Chicago Tribune

Former Mayor Richard M. Daley will stay at Northwestern Memorial Hospital's intensive care unit at least through midweek to undergo further testing after he fell ill Friday while on a business trip to Scottsdale, Ariz.

Daley, 71, is alert and in good spirits, but doctors want to pin down the cause of his ailment before he leaves, said Jacquelyn Heard, a longtime aide and spokeswoman for the Katten Muchin Rosenman law firm where Daley is of counsel. "He may be here until midweek, if not longer," Heard said.

Daley felt ill Friday afternoon at a conference he was attending with members of his firm, Heard said. He was still feeling ill and disoriented when he boarded the plane home, she said. The former mayor's family had an ambulance waiting when his plane returned to Chicago on Friday, Heard said.

Daley's illness came the same day his nephew, Richard "R.J." Vanecko, pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter in the 2004 death of David Koschman. Vanecko agreed to serve 60 days in jail.

EXPRESS LINES

- Prosecutors said Saturday that the Chicago man who allegedly shot a convenience store owner Thursday morning acted after the proprietor of a nearby shop offered him $3,000 to "whack" the competitor.
- A 60-year-old man was taken to a hospital early Sunday morning after accidentally plunging over a CTA platform and falling onto the tracks in a Loop subway, police said.

U.S. abortion rate hits lowest level since 1973

NEW YORK The abortion rate in the United States dipped to its lowest since 1973, coinciding with a steep decline in overall pregnancy and birth rates, a study from a non-profit sexual health organization showed Sunday.

The rate declined to 16.9 abortions per 1,000 women between the ages of 15 and 44 in 2011, the latest year studied, which was well below the 1981 peak of 29.3 per 1,000 and the lowest since 1973 when the rate was 16.3 per 1,000, the study from Guttmacher Institute showed.

"With abortion rates falling in almost all states, our study did not find evidence that the national decline in abortions during this period was the result of new state abortion restrictions. We also found no evidence that the decline was linked to a drop in the number of abortion providers during this period," says Rachel Jones, lead author of the study.

The decline in abortions coincided with a drop in overall pregnancy and birth rates, and contraceptive use and methods improved during the period, Jones said. The recent recession also led many women and couples to want to avoid or delay pregnancy and childbearing.

The study also found that the total number of abortion providers declined by only 4 percent between 2008 and 2011, and the number of clinics, which provide the large majority of abortion services, declined by just 1 percent.

While the overall abortion rate declined, the proportion of abortions that were early medication procedures continued to increase, according to the study.

An estimated 239,400 early medication abortions were performed in 2011, representing 23 percent of all nonhospital abortions, an increase from 17 percent in 2008. The study estimated that 59 percent of all known abortion providers offer this service.

7 Protesters disrupt Thai election

HAWKING MAD

Grrrrr! Even a Super Bowl blowout can really make our blood boil

By Chris Sosa | REDEYE

Is it just us, or was everyone mad heading into this Super Bowl?

Brian Urlacher still upset with the Bears. Hall of Fame linemen taking shots at would-be Hall of Fame linemen. Meteorologists kneeing guys in the groin (seriously, did you see The Weather Channel's Jim Cantore? Badass).

Then there was the game itself. Denver's super offense vs. Seattle's super defense. Peyton Manning's arm vs. Richard Sherman's mouth. Everybody vs. the weather.

Maybe that's what happens when you put the Super Bowl in—er, right next to—New York. Everyone turns into Jay “Dooooon’t Caaaaare” Cutler.

Here are the moments that got under our skin, on a scale from Furious to Seething to Smiling to Cackling.

CHRIS SOSA IS REDEYE'S SPORTS EDITOR. @REDEYESPORTSCHI

The weather

Fox reported it was 49 degrees at kickoff, which means it was warmer in East Rutherford, N.J., than it was in both Seattle and Denver. The lowest Super Bowl kickoff temp was 39 degrees, so this wasn't even in the neighborhood. However, we have no explanation as to why Peyton Manning was wearing gloves. How mad? Furious

'Natural rubbing action'

Fox broadcaster Troy Aikman was talking about receivers obstructing defensive backs when he used this phrase, though he could have been talking about all sorts of NSFW things. Sorry, we can't help but chuckle. It's the 12-year-old in us. And you. You can admit it.

How mad? Cackling

Rob Riggle

The actor seemed like he was in every other commercial leading up to kick-off. He was amusing in “21 Jump Street” and “Step Brothers,” but not “starring in a series of Super Bowl Sunday commercials” amusing.

How mad? Cackling

Have Percy!

For a guy who barely played this season because of injury, Seattle receiver Percy Harvin was a monster Sunday. Not only did he have two carries for 45 yards, but his kickoff return for a TD to open the second half all but sealed the Broncos' fate.

How mad? Cackling

'Nipplegate' Part 2

Bruno Mars was fine and all. We're just waiting for all the backlash for the not one but FOUR nipples exposed by the Red Hot Chili Peppers. They should be forced to apologize to everyone and pay everyone $1 million in restitution.*

How mad? Furious

*YEAH, NONE OF THAT SHOULD HAPPEN. JANET JACKSON DESERVED BETTER 10 YEARS AGO.

Jermaine Kearse

If you turned off the game after halftime, we understand. But that means you missed his sweet catch and spin move where he broke 30 tackles and scored a touchdown. Holy. Crap.

How mad? Cackling

Throw in the towel already

Really, would anyone have been mad had Fox cut away from the game to show more "Brooklyn Nine Nine"? Yeah, didn't think so. Think about it, future Super Bowl broadcasters. Your ratings depend on it.

Not the crutches!

Richard Sherman, the guy who yelled his way into America's consciousness two weeks ago, ended up injured to the point that he couldn't finish the game—essentially robbing everyone of potentially the best postgame interview of all time.

HAIL

WINGED ENGINEERS

After two years of “Star Wars”-themed winners, Volkswagen fell flat last year with its white office worker doing a broad Jamaican accent. This year, though, the German automaker nailed it by combining VW’s claimed reliability with a bit from “It’s a Wonderful Life”: Every time one of the cars hit 100,000 miles, a German engineer earned his wings. The result: funny, feathery scenes at the factory that also served to emphasize a product attribute.

The even less flavorful version of Budweiser spent a lot of money, again, to be all over the Super Bowl. And, well, one ad highlighted the beer’s container. And a series of others took a very long walk down a crowded block, putting Don Cheadle, a llama, Arnold Schwarzenegger and Reggie Watts into the ads, just to get to its so-so punch line about the kind of night that would include all of those participants.

THE GOOD, THE BAD AND

FAIL

WASTED CELEBRITY

Ben Kingsley on bad guys always being played by Brits, for Jaguar, was as boring as it was expensive. The company should have kept the account with “Mad Men’s” Don Draper. Laurence Fishburne, re-animating his Morpheus character from “The Matrix” for Kia’s new luxury sedan, was OK, until he sang opera. Terry Crews and the Muppets, for Toyota, tried too hard, while Ellen DeGeneres, for Beats Music, didn’t try hard enough.

THE WHAAA?!

WAS IT JUST US, OR WERE THE SUPER BOWL ADS PRETTY LAME THIS YEAR?

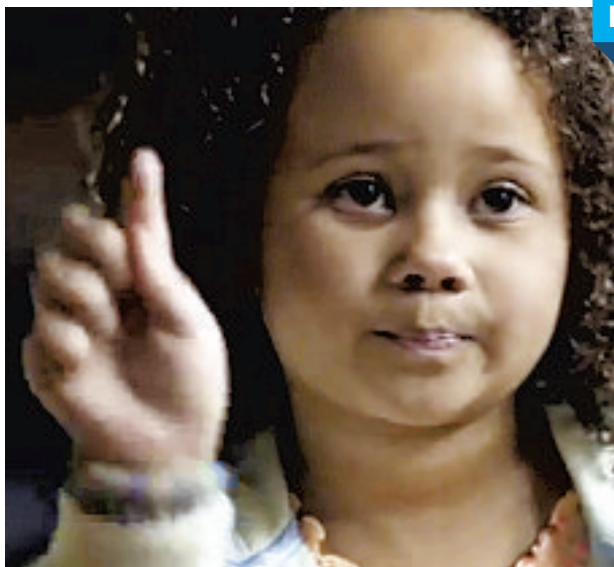

Chicago Tribune

In football, a safety is worth two points, and it’s a rarity. That it happened right away in Sunday’s Super Bowl set the tone not just for the game, but for the game’s advertising. One big-spending company after another played it cautious by loading up on celebrities, yet everyone from Bob Dylan to Scarlett Johansson proved kind of a letdown. Even Budweiser’s Clydesdales weren’t up to usual standards, while faces in the crowd (Coke) proved more effective. There were lots of wordy ads that lacked the impact of, say, the big Chrysler spots of recent years. And while car advertisers Volkswagen and Hyundai got bang for their buck, most went for the seemingly safe bet of a big, expensive production. Safety in advertising earns no points at all.

PROGRESSIVE BREAKFAST

From one angle, Cheerios’ ad wasn’t exactly bold. It relied on a standard cute-kid formula, showing a daughter negotiating with her dad for a new puppy upon learning she had a baby brother on the way. The twist, though, is that the cereal once again used the interracial family that had previously ignited some controversy. Good for Cheerios for sticking to its guns and finding a way to serve the traditional but insist on the contemporary.

CONTEXT-SPECIFIC ADS

TurboTax tied its first-quarter ad cleverly into Sunday's game. Watching Denver versus Seattle, if you're from elsewhere, it said, was like watching "Sean" dance with your dream prom date—and then having to see Sean's statistics and shots of Sean in slow-motion. It was funny enough to make you forget what a pain it is to do taxes. And T-Mobile deftly used famous unemployed QB Tim Tebow to emphasize all the things you can do without a contract.

HAIL

EXPLOITED MALES

The tables have turned. Instead of lots of scantily clad women, this year's ads (and halftime show) brought the beefcake. Traditional exploiter GoDaddy eschewed women for mostly male bodybuilders in a winning spot. Hulk Hogan and Schwarzenegger showed up in (good) RadioShack and (meh) Bud Light ads. And then there was David Beckham for H&M. Lame ad, but, in an event filled with beer, it clearly showed the best six-pack.

FAIL

DYLAN SELLS OUT

First, Bob Dylan's song "I Want You" showed up as the backdrop for the Chobani bear-buying-yogurt ad. Then he took the role as Chrysler Super Bowl pitchman that Eminem, Clint Eastwood and Oprah Winfrey have occupied so well. But Dylan's spot was kind of a muddle accented by some sour notes of jingoism ("let Asia assemble your phone ... we will build your car"). If you're going to sell out, at least make sure the material is first-rate.

Shiny things! Mars sparkles at halftime

Reuters

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. Accompanied by a light show that featured 80,000 fans with illuminated hats, Bruno Mars rocked the Super Bowl halftime show on Sunday with a selection of his hits including "Treasure" and "Runaway Baby."

Dressed in a glittery, '50s-style jacket and narrow tie, the bouffant-topped singer danced across the stage as fire effects and fireworks lit up East Rutherford, N.J.'s MetLife Stadium.

He was backed by the Red Hot Chili Peppers, whose lead singer Anthony Kiedis strutted out onto the stage shirtless and in shorts even as the temperature dropped to 44 degrees, belting out the group's 1991 hit "Give It Away."

Mars later rolled on a round stage out to the center of the field to perform "Just the Way You Are," which earned him the first of his two Grammy Awards, completing his performance.

Mars, whose album "Unorthodox Jukebox" was named best pop vocal album at the 2014 Grammys, had joked that he prepared for the rigors of performing at the first outdoor cold-weather Super Bowl by securing his pompadour hairstyle with "three gallons of hairspray."

Before the game, soprano Renee Fleming delivered a rousing performance of the national anthem, backed by a symphony orchestra singers from all four branches of the U.S. armed forces and fireworks.

Fleming, with four Grammys to her name, was the first opera star to sing the national anthem before the NFL championship.

1	What would it take to bring the Super Bowl to Chicago?	Money. Money and the promise that we won't do any more "Superfans" skits.	Kristin Cavallari and Stephen Colletti have a better chance of rekindling their relationship than that happening.	Considering how hard it is to keep the streets plowed in the winter, do we really want it here?	Qatar money.	Palm trees, warm weather and a miracle for a lakefront heat wave.
2	Who's your favorite to win next year's Super Bowl?	The Cleveland Browns. Wait, did you say "win" or "watch next year's Super Bowl on TV"?	The Detroit Lions! smiles and gives a subtle wink to the camera	I expect Budweiser to make a strong comeback. Did you see that adorable ad with the puppy and the Clydesdales?	Da Bearsssssssss.	Bears! Bears 120, Broncos 12.
3	Who should be next to join Lovie Smith in Tampa Bay?	Hall of Famer Derrick Brooks, proud grad of THE UNDEFEATED NATIONAL CHAMPION FLORIDA STATE SEMINOLES.	The entire annoying NFL Fox broadcasting team so they get the hell off everyone's television. My God.	Jerry Angelo. If only for the comedic possibilities.	Well, Rex Grossman is his quarterback.	Mike Martz, so they can feel our pain down South.
4	Give the NHL a reason to play a game at U.S. Cellular Field.	Easy: the title. NHL: Hell in The Cell. It doesn't exist and I already bought tickets.	Ballpark hot dogs! I don't care who you are ... nothing beats them.	Why do we want to make the NHL angry?	Southpaw's a helluva skater?	Maxwell Street is the only place to get bone-in pork chop sandwiches AND white tube socks in the same stop.
5	Finish the sentence: The Bulls should ____ before the trade deadline.	Trade Carlos Boozer for picks and an expiring deal. Starts whistling Melo comin'!	Ask Kim Jong Un if he'll trade Dennis Rodman back to Chicago so he can play again.	Worst. Mad Lib. Ever.	Get plenty of sleep and take their vitamins.	Keep losing. Two words: Jabari Parker.

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

For nine-sixteenths of a second, Janet Jackson's right breast was exposed to 9 million viewers of Super Bowl XXXVIII, and the world was changed. We all remember where we were when Justin Timberlake ripped away that cup of fabric—or at least remember hearing our friends' shrieks while we were in the other room refilling on chips. It's been 10 years since that fateful matchup, but the effects still resonate today. Here are the legacies of that one bizarre moment.

Peanut crushes it for charity

Chicago Tribune

Being a finalist two times in three years only brought more attention to the off-field work of Bears cornerback Charles Tillman, who was announced Saturday night as the winner of the Walter Payton Man of the Year Award.

Tillman, who was one of three finalists in 2012, was selected over Jay Feely of the Arizona Cardinals and Thomas Davis of the Carolina Panthers at the NFL Honors at Radio City Music Hall. The award takes into account a player's community service and on-field accomplishments.

It was an emotional moment for Tillman, who teared up on stage after Commissioner Roger Goodell presented the award.

"This is No. 1," he said. "I couldn't even talk. I can talk about going to Super Bowls, and creating turnovers and forcing fumbles, getting picks, getting touchdowns. But I've never been so nervous in my life to get on stage and talk in front of so many people with so much passion about what I do and my daughter and my family."

Tillman is the fifth Bears player to win the award and the first since Jim Flanigan shared the honor with Derrick Brooks in 2000.

The award has been around since 1970 and was named posthumously for Payton, the 1977 recipient.

The late Dave Duerson was honored in 1987 and Mike Singletary won in 1990.

THE MOUTHWATCH

He can shoot. He's doing some jogging on a treadmill. He's coming along, still got to be patient, just go step by step. Nothing close to practicing."

—Bulls coach Tom Thibodeau, on Derrick Rose's progress

Only one Black Unicorn?

Tight end Martellus Bennett appears to have failed Bears Nation. He has said he'd try to get his brother, Seattle defensive lineman Michael Bennett, to sign in Chicago. Yet according to the NFL Network, Michael is set to re-sign with the Seahawks. Time to go to Plan B, Bears.

The 10 most scandalous moments of 'Scandal'

Zap2it.com

"Scandal" is a show that lives and dies by the jaw drop. You know what we mean: those moments that leave you barely able to catch your breath. But not all OMG moments are made equal.

As we try to ignore our Olivia Pope withdrawals (the show returns Feb. 27) we've put together the definitive ranking of the 10 most totally insane moments on "Scandal" so far. Pop yourself some popcorn, pour a glass of red wine and get ready. Spoilers obviously abound.

10. Cyrus pimps out James—and it works

For a man who almost had his husband killed, it seems silly to suggest Cyrus' (Jeff Perry) lowest moment was when he coldly used James (Dan Bucatinsky) as bait for Daniel Douglas Langston's (Jack Coleman) wandering eye. The fact that it worked and its the devastating outcome? Well, that's just icing on the OMG cake.

9. Mellie's rape by her father-in-law

As the show slowly began to soften Mellie (Bellamy Young) in Season 3, this revelation, via flashback, of her rape at the hand of her drunken father-in-law was plenty divisive. The possibility that President Fitzgerald Grant's (Tony Goldwyn) firstborn may actually be his half-brother? Yikes.

8. Sally Langston kills husband Daniel Douglas

That devastating outcome from Cyrus' pimping we mentioned earlier? Yeah, that's this: another dead body on his conscience and a wildly unstable vice president with bloodstained hands. The effects of this one are unclear, as Season 3 went into hiatus just as this occurred.

7. The truth behind Defiance

Olivia (Kerry Washington), Mellie, Cyrus, Hollis Doyle (Gregg Henry) and Supreme Court Justice Verna Thornton (Debra Mooney) rigged Fitz's election? Consider us as shocked as he was.

6. Fitz gets shot in the head

This startling event made clear that not a single person on "Scandal" was safe.

5. Fitz kills Verna

After learning the truth about Defiance, and that she'd been the one to order his assassination attempt, a vengeful Fitz smothers Verna in her hospital room.

4. Mama Pope chews through her own wrists

Sure, there are bigger shocking moments regarding Olivia's presumed-dead mother (Khandi Alexander), but this one ranks simply because it elevated "Scandal" to the upper echelons of Grand Guignol.

3. Mama Pope comes back from the dead

That look on Olivia's face when her mom shows up right outside her apartment is killer. Imagine seeing your mom when you've thought she was dead for years.

2. Mama Pope's true identity

Then imagine learning that your once-thought-dead mother, whom you've just been reunited with, is an international terrorist who tricked your father into shooting down a plane.

1. Dad?

All that said, the biggest, baddest, most OMG moment came at the end of Season 2. After months of wondering just who the threatening Rowan (Joe Morton) really is, Liv spells it all out for us: "Dad?" It was a cliffhanger that left us salivating for months.

Beach House EP
Ty Dolla Sign

By Ernest Wilkins

REDEYE SOUND BOARD

One characteristic of great musicians is an ability to identify with the problems of the average listener. Two questions, though: What if your biggest problem is that you're just too fresh? What if you have an abundance of women at your disposal, and you're just not sure how many would fit into a beach cabana?

If these are your everyday worries, rising rap star Ty Dolla Sign feels your pain. In recent years Ty (real name: Tyrone Griffin) slowly has infiltrated earlobes alongside a wave of collaborative, potentially new-to-you California artists like Jamsu!, YG, Kid Ink, TeeFlii, Casey Veggies, Dom Kennedy, the HBK Gang and DJ Mustard. Ty has appeared on chart hits like YG's "Tobit It and Boot It" and earned a sleeper hit of his own in 2012 with "My Cabana," whose remix featured Young Jeezy and led to a record deal with Atlantic and Wiz Khalifa's Taylor Gang Records.

Ty's stuff is fun and a perfect example of the "sensitive thug" sub-genre of R&B. He croons about women a LOT. More specifically, he explores love, loss, avoiding vulnerability and the paranoia that comes with dating multiple women. Most songs on the recent "Beach House EP" navigate the line between outright singing and a more relaxed conversational tone. This is what R. Kelly would sound like if he were born in the '80s. This is what Chris Brown would sound like if he weren't trying to be Michael Jackson. It's smooth but blunt.

Lyrics like, "I hate chicks wearing fake nails, some chicks think I can't tell, she got butt pads on, that's a fail," let you know that Ty Dolla Sign is a bona fide scholar of Nate

Ty Dolla Sign
GETTY IMAGES

Dogg's "I'm going to say a bunch of grimy stuff, but listen to how smooth I sing it!" Vocational Academy. Features include Travis Scott, Wiz Khalifa, the aforementioned Veggies and Mustard—that reminds me, I need to get lunch—and a surprising number of Chicago artists (Twista on "Work" and the Young Chop-produced, Fredo Santana-featured "Familiar").

Unfortunately, while the songs make enjoyable party music, "Beach House EP" doesn't have enough new material that will invoke multiple plays, a common problem with "official" releases containing songs from free mixtapes. It's also completely lazy to add two versions of "Paranoid"—the "regular version" featuring B.o.B. is a remix, and its pairing with the "remix" featuring Trey Songz and French Montana constitutes the rare "three-mix," a term I just created.

Repetitive concepts aside, "Beach House EP" is a promising look into Ty's full-length, arriving later this year.

Iron and Wine's shock to the system, 'Ghost on Ghost'

Chicago Tribune

"I get restless pretty quick," is how singer-songwriter Sam Beam, who records under the name Iron and Wine, explains his latest album, "Ghost on Ghost." Recorded with strings and horn sections and backup singers, it's an eclectic folk/pop/R&B album that practically swings.

Even for longtime Iron and Wine fans, who have gotten used to Beam's frequent detours from his bedrock whispery folk, "Ghost on Ghost" was a shock to the system. Beam is unsure exactly how the album has been received—not very well, he has a feeling, but it's hard to tell, and he's trying to remain detached. Tell him the album has gotten mostly positive reviews and he'll say, politely, "Oh, yeah? That's great," as if it had nothing to do with him at all.

Interviewers often use words like "recluse" to describe Beam, who recently moved his family from their longtime home of Dripping Springs, Texas, closer to relatives in North Carolina, but in a recent phone interview, he was friendly and quick to laugh. In advance of his benefit show for the Old Town School of Folk Music (he played two sets there Saturday night), Beam talked Burt Bacharach, beards and trying (or, mostly, not trying) to keep his fanbase happy.

On being an old-fashioned band leader

I definitely took advantage of it. I was a lazy bum. I made everybody work so hard and just sat back and watched them. I did most of my work in the pre-production. ... It was the first record I'd done with a bunch of union players who had union hours. We would go in and leave with, like, two or three tunes. That never happens in indie rock, where you're arguing about a click track or whatever.

On Burt Bacharach as an unlikely influence

We definitely talked about Burt Bacharach a lot in the studio. He's fearless with melody. I love what he does, but this is a genre pot-pourri. (It's) Bacharach meets everybody else that he probably wouldn't hang out with.

On having a beard in the hot Texas summers

It's a commitment to excellence. Everybody asks me that. I think hats in the summer are a problem. Beards are not a problem.

On artistic restlessness

I don't really think about it too much. I just kind of do what I like. You could definitely spend a lot more time thinking about how to make a cohesive sounding set of records or how to hold onto a fan base than I do. ... I'm not necessarily impulsive, but at the same time, I go where my ears are pulling me at the moment. I feel like I make a decision based on what I like at the time, then move on to the next thing.

On what the next album might sound like

I do feel like it's time to cleanse the palate a little bit. ... I have a few songs that sound like a cross between hymns and country music. I have a couple of other things I've been working on, too. [Band of Horses frontman] Ben Bridwell and I have been talking about doing some stuff. ... I'm kind of keeping the schedule open. To see what wants to be born first.

Jeff Mangum: Myth, and enduring songs

Chicago Tribune

After a decade-plus hiatus that turned him into indie-rock's version of the prodigal son, Jeff Mangum is back, this time with a reunited version of his '90s band, Neutral Milk Hotel, for two sold-out concerts this week at the Riviera.

Two years ago, Mangum played a well-received solo tour, the first time he performed an entire set of Neutral Milk Hotel songs in Chicago since 1998.

Just where Mangum went and what he did in the interim remains something of a mystery. Mangum himself has ignored countless interview requests, though he did respond to a few shouted queries from the audience during the first of his two shows at the Athenaeum Theatre in 2012 about where he'd been all these years.

"Living with the love of my life," Mangum responded.

Neutral Milk Hotel

Sold out

Mangum's childhood friend and frequent musical collaborator Robert Schneider of Apples in Stereo once described Mangum's hiatus this way: "He never fell out of touch with reality. He's more in touch with reality than most people. ... He's passionately on a quest of self-discovery. ... He wasn't trying to be a rock star or make a living [from playing music]. He was trying to find out about himself and about the universe."

SEND US YOUR DEMOS!

In 2013, the 10th annual RedEye Rock 'n' Vote was simply huge: A packed House of Blues crowd partied with whysowhite, Michele McGuire, DVS Jackson Esq. and the Addies, with McGuire ultimately taking home the title. And we're not stopping there.

Rock 'n' Vote is back—which means it's time for any Chicago band seeking exposure to send in their demos (music, bio, anything else you have).

We'll pick the Top 10 submissions, and RedEye readers will listen to the finalists and vote for which acts they want to see play our RedEye Rock 'n' Vote concert this spring.

Don't delay! Submissions must be received by April 11. If you're entering electronically, send submissions (music, hi-res color photos, etc.) to mpais@tribune.com.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

It's time to be more open to embracing outside ideas. Your therapist might want you to break up with your partner because of some abusive undercurrents, or your parents could be worried about your current boyfriend.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Mercury is creating some emotional angst. You'll confess that you're dying to get married, even if you just met that cute guy three weeks ago. Or you'll tell your girlfriend all about your last disastrous relationship.

Aries March 21-April 19

You're probably getting tired of butting your head into a brick wall. Venus is making it harder than ever for you to find peace in your relationship.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Your honey wants something from you, and you're not sure if you can deliver it. Your wife wants a kid, and you're still partying with the boys every night. Your guy wants you to move in, but you hate his apartment.

Gemini May 21-June 21

As Mercury, your planetary ruler, goes retrograde, you could become obsessed with the one who got away. Even if the guy you left was a loser, you're wondering "What if?" Stop being so clueless.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Intense Saturn is urging you to express your passion. If you're hung up on somebody, make sure that the object of your affection understands your feelings. Boldness will pay off.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

A sun opposition has you questioning your sexual style. If you're in the habit of pouncing on the first date, maybe you should take your time getting to know that potential sweetheart.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Be patient over the next few weeks. Mercury will be in retrograde, making it harder for you to judge where you stand with that certain somebody. If you're in love, don't get engaged. If you just met somebody, keep your options open.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You like to stay friends with everybody you've ever dated, and sometimes, this works against you. The moon is reminding you that it's normal to feel possessive of your honey.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Your partner could surprise you. Maybe that guy you're dating wants to move in. Perhaps that sexy lady is interested in taking things to the next level. A moon opposition could increase your tension and doubt.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

A bouncy moon is making it hard for you stay focused. You'll want to date 10 people at once or travel to several exotic locations in one weekend.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Moody Mercury is making it harder for you to believe in true love. Suddenly, you can't stand the way your husband chews, or you detest the way your girlfriend squints when she's concentrating. Don't freak out over the small stuff.

Chicago's 'Pawn' closing up shop

Tru TV has decided to pull the plug on the once-promising "Hardcore Pawn: Chicago."

The reality show revolving around brothers Randy and Wayne Cohen and their Royal Pawn Shop in the Loop will not return to the network for a second season, according to a spokesman for Turner Broadcasting, which owns Tru TV.

"Hardcore Pawn: Chicago" was a spinoff of the Detroit-based "Hardcore Pawn," now in its eighth season.

"Tru TV has decided not to renew the series," Turner spokesman Mitchell Squires said last Thursday by email. "As is policy, all relevant parties were told."

“If they don’t renew us, we want to leave on good terms. They gave us our start. They put us on the map.” —Wayne Cohen

When reached for comment last Tuesday by phone, the Cohens said they had not yet been told whether or not the show would return but did say their contract with the network was up March 1.

"If they don't renew us, we want to leave on good terms," Wayne Cohen said. "They gave us our start. They put us on the map."

The premiere of "Hardcore Pawn: Chicago" broke Tru TV ratings records for a new series when it debuted last year on New Year's Day. A month later, Tru TV ordered eight more episodes of the series, which was produced by former World Championship Wrestling president Eric Bischoff and Jason Hervey ("The Wonder Years").

Even though "Hardcore Pawn: Chicago" isn't coming back, it appears the Chicago area will have a strong reality TV presence this year. Bravo's "100 Days of Summer," Reelz's "The Capones" and Oxygen's upcoming "Bad Girls Club: Chicago" all filmed in or near the city. And the production company behind "Hardcore Pawn: Chicago," American Mass Media Corporation, has been shooting a reality pilot starring pro wrestler Lisa Marie Varon and her Squared Circle restaurant in Lincoln Park.

As for the Cohens, they said they would be open to appearing on a reality TV show with another network if Tru TV canceled their series.

"We've had a great time," Randy Cohen said about the filming experience. "And it's been great for business."

red hot Lex appeal

So long, Seth
A few of Seth Meyers's friends paid the "Weekend Update" anchor a visit during his final

"Saturday Night Live" as head writer on Saturday. Amy Poehler, Stefon (Bill Hader) and Andy Samberg said goodbye to Meyers, who will take over as host of "Late Night" when Jimmy Fallon moves to his new job hosting "The Tonight Show."

The write stuff

And the awards season keeps on rolling. The Writers Guild of America honored Spike Jonze for his futuristic love story "Her" with its award for original screenplay, and Billy Ray of "Captain Phillips" won for adapted screenplay on Saturday night. Both are nominated in the same categories at the March 2 Oscars.

'Back' to Broadway

Look, the "turn every beloved movie of your childhood into a Broadway musical" train has left the station, and you can't do anything about it. The latest screen-to-stage conversion will be "Back to the Future," according to Variety, and the original film's director and screenwriter are on board. Please, please let this just be wall-to-wall Chuck Berry songs.

Jesse Eisenberg
GETTY IMAGES

In case you missed it, Jesse Eisenberg has been tapped to play Lex Luthor in Warner Brothers' untitled "Batman vs. Superman" movie, thewrap.com reported Friday. Oh, and Jeremy Irons is playing Alfred. With Ben Affleck as Batman, this is shaping up to be one wild cast list.

Magic mismatch?

Hold on to your broomsticks, "Harry Potter" fans. J.K. Rowling has one more plot twist for you. In a yet-to-be-released interview with Emma Watson in Wonderland magazine, the author admits Hermione shouldn't have ended up with Ron, ew.com reports. Rowling says Harry Potter's bffs ended up together "as a form of wish fulfillment." "It was a choice I made for very personal reasons, not for reasons of credibility," Rowling said. "Am I breaking people's hearts by saying this? I hope not." Keep twisting the knife, J.K. Keep twisting.
